ABOUT CLTA

The Chinese Language Teachers Association, Inc. (CLTA) is a professional organization devoted exclusively to the study of Chinese language, culture and pedagogy. In the years since our establishment in 1962, the Chinese Language Teachers Association has both reflected and responded to changes in our students, our teachers and our world. While the focus of our organizational energy is most concretely evident in our various publications and at our annual meeting, we are constantly seeking to expand our range of service to the Chinese language teaching profession. Specifically, we are presently working on two major initiatives: (1) to act as an advocate for and facilitator of enhanced articulation among all Chinese language learning settings, including the integration of non-textbook-specific national standards; and, (2) to serve as a provider of teacher training programs of both a pre-service and in-service nature. We are also dedicated to enhancing classroom-based application of the results of empirical research on Chinese language acquisition and instruction.
SYMPOSIUM KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Mr. Paul Sandrock
Director of Education at the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages

Paul Sandrock, Director of Education at the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL), directs this national organization’s professional development and initiatives around standards, curriculum, instruction, and performance assessment. Previously, Paul was Assistant Director of Content and Learning at the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction (DPI), beginning that state’s implementation of Common Core State Standards, coordinating the areas of English language arts, mathematics, international education, and world languages. He earlier served as the DPI statewide consultant for world languages. Paul taught Spanish for 16 years in middle school and high school and authored The Keys to Assessing Language Performance and Planning Curriculum for Learning World Languages.

Prof. Shou-hsin Teng 鄧守信教授
Chair Professor of Chinese Linguistics at Chung Yuan Christian University in Taiwan

Prof. Shou-hsin Teng, Chung Yuan Christian University, Taiwan. A native of Taiwan, professor Teng received his doctoral degree in linguistics at the University of California, Berkeley, in 1973 and taught Chinese language and linguistics at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, from 1973 till 1995, when he accepted an appointment at the National Taiwan Normal University, Taipei, to undertake the establishment of the first ever graduate degree program in teaching Chinese as a second/foreign language. He retired from the latter in 2009, and is currently a Chair Professor of Chinese Linguistics at Chung Yuan Christian University in Taiwan. Prof. Teng had been an active member of CLTA, serving as the editor of its JCLTA for many years and the founder of its Newsletter. He was also the 2nd recipient of the Walton Lifetime Achievement Award, CLTA. His recent publications include A Pedagogical Grammar of Chinese as a Second Language 对外汉语教学语法, Beijing Language University Press, 2010, and Studies on Modern Chinese Syntax 汉语语法论文集, Beijing Language University Press, 2012.
REMARKS FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear colleagues,

Welcome to the very First CLTA International Symposium on Chinese Language Teaching and Learning organized by the Chinese Language Teachers Association, USA! With a history of over half a century and a current membership of over 900 individuals and institutions from across the globe as well as over a dozen affiliated regional CLTAs across the U.S., CLTA has grown to be a premier international organization in Chinese language teaching and learning. This also means that there is an ever strong demand for more opportunities for scholarly exchanges and practical training in Chinese language pedagogy. This symposium is the result of several years of planning, and our local host, headed by Professor Yea-Fen Chen, of the Indiana University-Bloomington, has contributed immensely to our field by taking on the task of hosting this major event.

While there are many conferences and workshops available, this symposium features dialogues and interaction at multiple levels: among global Chinese language organizations; among world language organizations, of which CLTA is one, in the US; among US-based sister Chinese language organizations; and, finally, among all the CLTA affiliated regional organizations. I hope that the symposium will provide ample opportunities for exchange of ideas that will serve well our common goal of a deeper understanding of peoples and cultures via language learning.

I’m delighted to have you here and be part of this historic event. Again, welcome!

Hongyin Tao
President of CLTA
Professor of Chinese Language and Linguistics, UCLA
REMARKS FROM THE CONFERENCE CHAIR

各位與會學者與同行:

歡迎大家於深秋時節來到美國印第安納大學布魯明頓分校參加由美國中文教師學會主辦的首屆中文教學國際研討會。印大是過去這一年美國中文教師學會的新家，也是我的母校，此次會議於此美麗的校園舉行別具意義。

美國中文教師學會是一個美國重要的教師團體，創立於1962年，目前於世界各地有近千名會員，三年前在費城舉行了五十週年慶。此次國際研討會，與會人士近三百，是學會第一次自辦的大型國際會議。除了美國各州的學者及各級中文教師之外，尚有來自臺灣、中國、韓國、越南、英國、德國、捷克等地中文教師學會代表及學者參加，美國德文教師學會執行長及美國日文教師學會長，亦前來共襄盛舉。

有別於每年十一月與美國外語教師協會在不同城市合辦的五、六千人的大會，此次研討會選在大學校園，想為與會同胞、年輕學者提供更多樣的服務。除了近一百五十篇論文發表及兩個針對會員研究、就業需要而設計的工作坊外，更邀請了兩位知名學者鄧守信教授、Paul Sandrock先生為大會作專題演講。特別感謝鄧守信教授接受大會邀請，從太平洋彼岸不遠千里而來。此次會議也安排了校園參觀、校內戲劇及歌劇演出、會後旅遊等活動。此外，學會也藉此難得的機會擴大與其他美國國內外語教學組織及國際中文教師學會團體的合作與交流，期盼齊心為中文教育做出最大的努力。

一個大型國際會議的籌辦需要投注大量的人力及資源。感謝組委會的各位委員，尤其是本屆學會主席陶紅印教授與負責大會議程的沈禾玲教授，及來自愛荷華大學、普渡大學及本校三十多位辛苦的研究生義工們。感謝印大環球與國際研究學院及各個單位的贊助、參展書商及學校的支持。更感謝於深秋楓紅時節專程前來參與此歷史性的時刻的諸位。也希望各位學者、老師參會期間，有機會進一步交流並領略印大校園及布城之美。若有招待不週之處，敬請見諒。

致上我最真誠的感謝及歡迎。

陳雅芬 敬上

美國中文教師學會第一屆中文教學國際研討會組委會主席

美國中文教師學會執行長

Pre-conference workshops

| Workshop 1 Ballantine Hall 005 | Essentials for a Successful Job Interview; Wei Hong (Purdue University), Chengzhi Chu (University of California, Davis), & Jinhua Li (University of North Carolina at Asheville)
Primarily for graduate students and pre-service teachers who are or will be on job market for university positions in Chinese, this workshop provides practical strategies in understanding job descriptions, institutional needs and one’s own potentials in matching up such needs, and job application. Preparatory procedures in entering job market will be provided, including exploring job posts and preparing resumes, teaching statements, phone and campus interviews. If time permits, we will do a short mock interview and discuss its success (or failures).
Participant limit to 30.  Registration fee: $10 per person. |
| Workshop 2 Ballantine Hall 006 | Action Research; Helen Shen (The University of Iowa)
The workshop will address the characteristics and procedures of teacher action research in a Chinese L2 classroom setting. Concrete samples of conducting teacher action research in the second language classroom will be given. Participants will learn how to identify a research topic, write a research proposal, and carry out the study by following guidelines typically used in teacher action research.
Participant limit to 30.  Registration fee: $10 per person. |

Panel 1 IMU Dogwood Room
Studies on Reading and Writing in Advanced Chinese L2 Classrooms
This panel consists of four empirical studies exploring the important aspects of advanced-level reading comprehension, assessment, and technology-based writing instruction. The first and second studies answer the questions of what are advanced students’ attitude and performance by using a computer to write and by using media materials during writing in comparison with traditional paper-pencil writing. The third study investigates effects of inserting questions during the reading on reading comprehension. The fourth study reports how to develop and administer an Informal Reading Assessment (IRA) to be conveniently used by classroom teachers to assess students’ reading performance and the readability of textbook lessons.

Panel 2 IMU Persimmon
Phonetics Lab and Beyond: Bringing Phonetics to the Teaching and Assessment of Chinese Pronunciation
Rooted in the study of acoustic phonetics, this study aims to build teaching and assessment models for Chinese pronunciation that could be adopted in the classroom and further incorporated into an e-learning teaching platform. The first presentation reports the development of Chinese spoken corpus and its applications, the second presentation reports inter-language analysis from pedagogical perspectives, and the third presentation reports on using CAPL with automatic speech recognition to assess learners’ pronunciation of Chinese.

Panel 3 IMU Maple Room

Integrating Language and Culture into Curriculum Development for Chinese Heritage Language Learners

This panel focuses on how to integrate culture learning and language learning into CHL curriculum development. The first presentation will share with the audience the design and practice of a third-year CHL course, the second will focus on some curricular activities designed for CHL learners, and the third will introduce some extracurricular activities to promote culture and language learning among CHL learners. The fourth presentation examines how American high school students learned to talk about food when staying with host families in China.

Developing Intermediate Blended Chinese Course

This panel will show how to adopt different technology in developing teaching materials for college level intermediate Chinese course at two U.S. institutions. The first presentation focuses on the use of visual aids in the development of a blended Chinese course. The second presentation introduces how to use Smart Board to enhance blended teaching, including development of effective in-class activities and on-line grammar videos. The third presentation shares how our language center supports the development and implementation of fully online and blended language courses.

Panel 5 IMU Oak Room

Chinese as a Foreign Language Curriculum Development (I)

This panel consists of three presentations about Chinese curriculum development. The first presentation investigates how American university students evaluated the one-year regular semester Chinese program and 2-month summer intensive program offered by the Flagship Chinese Institute. The second presentation describes current Chinese curricula in US four-year colleges and universities that offer the Chinese major. The third presentation examines how pedagogical innovation integrating Universal Design for Learning may enhance the learning of Mandarin among the increasingly diverse student body.

Chair: Yu Li, Emory University
Panel 6 IMU Dogwood Room
Chinese as a Second Language Writing Instruction
The panel consists of four studies on writing instruction for Chinese as a second language learner. The first presentation examines learning outcomes in phonology, morphology and syntax through scrutiny of writing assignments at several course levels and calls attention to the need to fuse all four linguistic skills at an early stage of learning rather than segregating and delaying their development. The second presentation investigates the over-time development of learners’ writing proficiency in the Content-Based Instruction (CBI) course. The third presentation analyzes the data collected in a collaborative writing project assigned in the context of a Business Chinese course, and draws conclusions about the mediational means that best explained the process and results of the team project, such as first language, second language proficiency, task features, and group interaction. The fourth presentation introduces the Intellectual Engagement and Linguistic Achievement model in which online materials are selected and content-based instruction is adopted.

Panel 7 IMU Persimmon
CRIE-CFL: A tool for Chinese textual analysis and its application
The first presentation focuses on vocabulary. According the analysis of CRIE-CFL, the number of each level of vocabulary increased with the CEFR level increased, and the results of trend analysis individually achieved statistical significance. These demonstrated that each of features has a clear relationship with CEFR levels. The second presentation studies Chinese special sentence patterns in CSL/CFL such as Ba construction. The third presentation aims to investigate the textual readability for Chinese as a second language with a particular concern on the discourse connectives.

Strategizing Materials and Methods in Advanced Chinese Classes
This panel discusses material development and teaching methods for advanced Chinese classes. The first presentation investigates how Literature Circles framework is implemented to Chinese L2 advanced learners as a way of developing learner’s meaningful interactions with literary texts. The second one focuses on the effectiveness of student-led reading activities on the development of reading, listening, speaking and critical thinking skills. The third presentation presents comprehensive step-by-step collaborative writing assignments for advanced Chinese learners as well as the students’ evaluation on the individual tasks they completed and their reaction to the assignments. The fourth presentation discusses the pedagogical model of word meaning network in advanced Chinese multi-meaning vocabulary instruction.

Panel 9 IMU Walnut Room
Issues on Chinese Classroom Instruction
The panel deals with several issues about Chinese classroom instruction. The first presentation focuses on how intermediate Chinese learners’ self-correction helps improve their writing compared to simply giving teacher’s feedback alone without the requirement of self-correction. The second presentation uses TV advertisement, TV program and TV dramas to design for intermediate and advanced Chinese course. The third one proposes to restructure "top-to-bottom" approach with dialogues, sentences, and words in order and to teach from prosody to segments.

Panel 10 IMU Oak Room
Motivation, Learner Agency and Technology in Chinese Learning
This panel mainly discusses the motivation, learner agency and technology application in Chinese class. The first presentation uses socio-educational model and the framework of the internal structure of language learning motivation to investigate Chinese language learning attitudes and motivation across three proficiency levels. The second presentation introduces the concept of Flip Teaching with enhancing students’ autonomy and motivation as the underlying motif. The third presentation reports findings on how animated materials affect L2 acquisition by investigating the acquisition of the perfective particle LE in Mandarin Chinese.

華語為外語之寫作自動評估與教學

本研究藉由建置一個以華語為外語之寫作語料庫，透過大量外語學習者之寫作文本偏誤特徵的分析，發展出一套以華語為外語之寫作自動評估與教學回饋系統，進而作為華語寫作教學之輔助工具，以增進教學成效。第一個研究面向是「華語寫作語料庫建置與分析」，針對以 ACTFL 為架構的華語寫作能力建立單一題目不同等級華語為外語之寫作者的寫作語料庫。第二個研究面向是「華語為外語之寫作自動評估與回饋」，發展了一個能偵測句法類特徵及錯誤的文法剖析器來擷取華語為外語的寫作特徵。第三個研究面向是「基於華語寫作自動評估的教學策略」，從句本位的角度出發，利用外語寫作語料庫蒐集寫作的偏誤，並給予具體的寫作技巧建議，讓華語學習者具備基本的寫作能力。

Panel 12 IMU Persimmon

Task-based language teaching and oral proficiency in L2 Chinese

This panel explains theoretical foundation of task-based instruction and its role in facilitating the development of L2 Chinese learners’ oral proficiency followed by concrete teaching samples of task design at different proficiency level. The first presenter discusses how to design oral tasks for a First-year Chinese speaking class. The second presenter discusses how to design oral tasks for a second-year Chinese speaking class. The third presenter discusses how to design oral tasks for a third-year Chinese speaking class.

Live Chinatown Project: Constructing Meaningful Curriculum Based on Stevick’s Language Teaching and Learning

The panel introduces a collaborative curriculum project “Live Chinatown” by a group of K-16 Chinese language educators in East and West Coasts of U.S. The first presentation reports on a day trip for middle school students using resources in SF Chinatown for culture, history and language enrichment. The second presentation introduces the San Jose field trip designed to match the curriculum goals at Stevenson school. The third presentation focuses on how to integrate Washington DC’s Chinatown neighborhood and its local museums into language learning. The fourth presentation discusses “Confucius” to different level students. The fifth presentation discusses a Chinatown visiting project that requires learners to research on how to carry out daily life activities using Google Map, Yelp and other resources.

Panel 14 IMU Walnut Room

Design Chinese L2 learning activities that foster student engagement
This panel explores the relationship between student engagement and successful Chinese L2 language learning at secondary school level. The first presenter focuses on 3 design qualities “A safe environment”, “Affiliation”, and “Choice” and discusses the application of Free tech tools' in Chinese classrooms. The second presentation shows how to use some design qualities such as “Affiliation,” “Choice,” and “Authenticity,” to create real-life, meaningful, engaging, and student-based tasks that can make Chinese L2 learning more effective and interesting. The third presentation demonstrates how to use web-based applications to create students' own games that enhance Chinese L2 instruction.

Panel 15 IMU Oak Room

A New Paradigm for Advanced Chinese Language Education
This panel presents various curriculum models of Flagship which has great impact upon the current state of the advanced language instruction in the United States. The first presentation demonstrates how the URI Chinese Language Flagship Program uses assessment and testing as a means to help inform the curriculum and the educational process. The second presentation discusses four CBI models adopted in the UO Chinese Flagship Program, designed to address the non-linear and uneven development of accuracy and fluency in advanced Chinese language acquisition. The third presentation explains the Novice Starter Model at a Chinese Flagship Center from pre-freshman domestic summer training to content course teaching in the sophomore year. The fourth presentation will focus on language training in students' professional domains including tutoring in professional language usage, direct enrollment courses in students' major, and internships during the Capstone year.

CSL Teacher Education: Pedagogical Content Knowledge, Teaching Materials, and Multidimensional Assessment

This panel aims to address the issue of effective CSL teacher preparation and professional development by means of a theoretical framework TPACK, which refers to Technological, Pedagogical, and Content Knowledge. The first presentation aims to construct a model in terms of the expertise in teaching Chinese as the foreign language at Kindergarten level through an investigation of CSL teachers’ perceptions and need for professional development. The second presentation explores in details the role of communicative competence from a variety of general business Chinese teaching materials. The third presentation attempts to capture the essential qualities of TPACK by teacher educators for technology integration into pre-service teaching practice, while addressing the complex, multifaceted and situated nature of teacher evaluation through multidimensional assessment.

Panel 17 IMU Persimmon

Classroom-Based Research Studies, Assessment, and Goal Setting in Chinese Instruction

The panel adopts a macro-level perspective into Chinese as a second or foreign language teaching. The first presenter reviews classroom-based research studies that have been published both in China and North America in the field of teaching/learning Chinese as a second language. The second presentation investigates the Master’s theses and Doctoral dissertations in the field of Teaching Chinese as a second or foreign language (TCSL/TCFL) in China in the past ten years. The third presentation analyzes the weaknesses in the current Chinese assessment standard and proposes some suggestions. The fourth presentation uses a mixed method approach to investigate effects of goal-setting on L2 Chinese learners' development of linguistic knowledge.

Panel 18 IMU Maple Room

Structural Sensitivity and Learning of Chinese Characters among L2 Learners

This panel examines structural sensitivity and second language (L2) learners’ learning of Chinese characters. The first presentation traces the history of the debate on the nature of Chinese characters and discusses the significance of phonetics and semantic radicals in L2 pedagogy. The second presentation reports on a study that measured different aspects of radical awareness and addressed how they were differentiated by learners’ general reading proficiency. The third presentation found that direct teaching of word structures, including radicals, facilitated learners’ recognition of printed words. The three presentations provide compelling evidence that building learners’ structural sensitivity of characters should be an integral component of L2 Chinese pedagogy.

Taiwanese Cinema and Mandarin Teaching: From an Anthropological Perspective

This panel will use a comparative approach in the context of comparative literary and cultural theories to examine how different cultures present similar topics in terms of values and cultural thought. The first study examines the Taiwanese film After the Seventh Day and the American film A Little Bit of Heaven, focusing on the 'death' theme. The second study selects One Page of Taipei, Summer Waves, and The Girl Who I Loved so Long Ago as examples of many films, aiming to develop future Taiwanese Mandarin teaching materials. The third study examines the influence of recent ethnic films on teaching by using the original image of The Legend of Bagger Vance, discussing the teaching applications from the perspectives of historical ethnicity, culture, and art, and extending this to teaching applications through the American classic indigenous culture film Dances with Wolves. This panel will extend the discussion of cross-cultural comparisons.

High School Chinese Instruction

The panel focuses on high school Chinese instruction. The first presentation investigates the beliefs of English-speaking beginner learners of Chinese, about difficulties of Chinese learning and effective strategies of overcoming the difficulties they encounter. The second presentation analyzes the relationship between language acquisition and culture project designing. The third presentation mainly focuses on improving the L2 performance through step-by-step Collins Writing tasks.

Empowering Writing Practice with Online Collaborative Writing Tools-A Tentative Study

The use of social technologies brought a renewed attention to L2 collaborative writing. Yet, how to effectively apply such tools remains a question (Elola, 2010). Collaborated by three authors, this qualitative study examines the application of Web 2.0 collaborative writing tool in the teaching and learning of writing in intermediate CFL class. We will present the overview of the study, the design of the writing tasks, the analysis of students’ collaborative works in writing and the pedagogical implication of this study.

Teaching L2 Chinese from an Empirically-Based Discourse-Pragmatic Perspective

This panel includes three investigations. The first study investigates word-order constraints on Chinese "Zai+NP" prepositional phrase. The second study examines the discourse-pragmatic functions of Chinese adverb "Zhi", particularly when "zhiyou" and "zhiyao" constructions occur before or after associated clause. Additionally, text type is investigated. The third study examines the pragmatic functions of Chinese adverbs "Ke" and "Dao" as a procedural encoder.

Teaching Chinese Through Culture

The panel explores ways through which culturally viable activities are incorporated in and outside of class, making them an important part in both the students’ learning experience and their social life. The first presenter illustrates how Chinese social network websites help students retain linguistic skills learned in a classroom setting better and longer. The second presenter takes New Practical Chinese Reader as case study to provide several approaches the Chinese instructor can adopt in order to integrate language and culture in classroom. The last presenter intends to explore methods of implementing traditional zhiguai xiaoshuo (short supernatural narratives) into intermediate level Chinese course.

Chinese Study Abroad Program
In this panel, we will share experiences and thoughts on different Chinese Study Abroad Projects. The first presentation gives a comprehensive description of UMass Boston’s Fulbright-Hays Group Project Abroad Chinese Language Immersion Program. The second presentation introduces American Ambassador Project (AAP) and China In-depth Project (CIP) for the spring term, and Business Culture Difference (BCD) during the summer internship, designed to promote understanding between Chinese and Americans. The third presentation investigates the written and oral tests to assess students’ language gain. The fourth presentation discusses the role of dinner table talk in offering “opportunity spaces” for challenge, revision, and defense of moral stances.

Chinese as a Second Language Vocabulary Acquisition and Instruction
The panel discusses the Chinese vocabulary acquisition and instruction. The first presentation attempts to investigate how Chinese L2 learners acquire Chinese colloquial idioms under two different learning conditions. The second presentation shows how fun and easy learning Chinese can be and shares some creative methods of developing vocabulary materials. The third presentation demonstrates the important role that subject plays in Chinese vocabulary instruction. The fourth one gives a short overview on L1 and L2 word recognition studies in Chinese and their instructional implications.

Issues on High School Chinese Instruction
The panel discusses the Chinese instruction for high school students. The first presentation starts with an update on the AP Chinese Language and Culture Course and Exam and then deals with teaching strategies that help students achieve excellence in AP Chinese. The second presenter introduces three effective activities to attendees including modeling clay to make characters. The third presentation analyzes the local factors and essential conditions to support effective integration of technology, provides strategies for indicated content and foci best-paired with technology, and offers some technology resources with concrete examples and live demonstration. The forth presentation demonstrates how teachers create text scrolls and text feature posters in the target language to reinforce Common Core Anchor Standards and meet proficiency standards for students in grades K-8.

Writing and Speaking development of Heritage Learners
The Panel includes four studies about heritage learners' writing and speaking development. The first presentation compares the writing samples of heritage and non-heritage learners and proposes the differences as well as the improvement of instruction. The second presentation focuses on three aspects of advanced-level Chinese as a heritage language including the characteristics of their linguistic competence, the selection, and the editing of learning materials, and learning tasks and exercises. The third presentation investigates the motivation of learning Mandarin Chinese by young adolescent Chinese heritage speakers at community-based programs and at public/private schools in the United States.

Chinese Vocabulary Acquisition for Beginning and Advanced Learners
The panel focuses on Chinese vocabulary acquisition among beginning and advanced level Learners. The first presentation examines vocabulary acquisition and retention in a beginning Chinese course by comparing competitive activities (e.g., races, games, point earning contests) with cooperative activities (e.g., surveys, role plays, information gap activities). The second presentation investigates the impact of compound awareness training on L2 Chinese vocabulary learning among advanced learners. The third presentation collects 100 high frequency colloquial idioms from China TV dramas and analyzes the contexts to help advanced level students to fully understand the meaning and application of these idioms.

Chinese L2 Phonetics Acquisition and Instruction

The panel includes three presentations about Chinese phonetics acquisition and instruction. The first presentation introduces four principles in beginning level phonetic instruction. The second presentation examines the second language (L2) tonal productions of Chinese monosyllabic narrow focus made by 20 American English-speaking learners and 20 Tokyo Japanese-speaking learners. The third presentation aims to document the self-initiated “de-fossilize” process of a college CFL student who has been using alveolar stop [t] consistently to replace [ʨ], [ʨʰ] and [ɕ] in Mandarin Chinese. The fourth presentation investigates the effects of two types of teaching methods (Tonal-direction focused teaching method vs. Tonal-height focused teaching method) on the production of Tone 3 by English-speaking learners.

Using Standards to Focus Chinese Language Learning K-16: Standards identify what students should know and be able to do as they progress in their language learning from their first experience through professional applications of their skills. Emphasizing the three modes of communication (interpersonal, interpretive, and presentational), language teachers can develop students’ essential 21st century skills of communication, literacy, collaboration, critical thinking, and a global competence. Assessment of language performance makes the standards real in the classroom, focusing instruction for teachers and learning for students. Explore how to assess learners’ performance in a standards-based program, engaging and motivating students at all levels.

Keynote speaker: Shou-hsin Teng, Professor, Chunyuan Christian University, Taiwan

Globalization of the Chinese Language: Facts and Fantasies: The recent surge in the number of learners of Chinese as a second/foreign language worldwide has prompted various responses from different quarters in the homelands of the language, viz. Mainland China and Taiwan. Some of these responses touch on the very nature and properties of the Chinese language that can lead to an erroneous representation of the Chinese language to most learners of the language worldwide. It is imperative that we in the field must face the reality, linguisitic or otherwise, squarely and not indulge in what I call fantasies about the Chinese language. This presentation will also examine the various aspects of a call, on Mainland China, for the globalization of the Chinese language as well as a number of possible implications for our field outside the homelands of the language. In particular, I shall speak harshly against our past, current and future reliance on the supply of Chinese language instructors from Taiwan and Mainland China. (PPT in English, spoken in Mandarin)

Intercultural Competence and Awareness in Chinese Teaching
The panel proposes that teaching Chinese language should be a simultaneously process of teaching culture, in the sense that culture serves both as a means and a goal. The first presentation explores the ways to help students foster positive attitudes towards cultural learning in beginning Chinese classroom, featuring Beijing Opera and student dormitory as sample cases. The second presentation conducts a pedagogical survey on using culture in teaching Chinese characters. The third presentation discusses how to make culture more relevant in teaching Chinese reading to intermediate level Chinese learners. The fourth presentation uses action research to explore the scope of possibilities and limitations in implementing intercultural communication theory into an Internet-based Chinese L2 course for beginners at the university level by investigating how it could enhance learners’ intercultural communication competence.

Chinese Teacher Development

The panel discusses issues on Chinese teacher development. The first presentation examines that institutional promotion mechanism shapes the challenges perceived by CFL teachers in U.S. higher education through the lens of Dynamic Systems Theories (DST). The second presentation analyzes 52 teaching plans and concludes 9 major problems faced by new Chinese teachers. The third presentation identifies the target language (TL) and L1 use in instructors’ speech and what difficulties they perceive in terms of using TL in class. The fourth presentation explores the challenges that Chinese as foreign language teachers face in their first year teaching.

Technology Application in Chinese Classrooms

The panel consists of four studies about the technology application in Chinese classrooms. The first presentation discusses how to build an engaging virtual Chinese language classroom that is cost effective and attains high levels of Chinese proficiency. The second presentation investigates how students’ learning strategies affect their learning outcome in online language courses, and how these effects are mediated by students’ individual characteristics. The third presentation applies instructional theories and strategies, pedagogy, learning theories and the online tools to extend the learning experiences beyond the classroom through the distant communication, interaction and collaboration among the teachers and the students. The fourth presentation focuses on the application of flipped teaching including the advantages and disadvantages, the suitable materials, and the effective use.

Different Approaches for Effective Chinese Teaching

The panel introduces instructional approaches in Chinese classroom. The first presentation discusses using the guided inductive approach on the teaching of grammar, stroke writing, and cultural association to adding different inductive learning into college Chinese classroom. The second presentation shows creative ways to tackle the two challenges in L2 Chinese listening instruction: how to effectively identify individual students’ difficulties in listening comprehension, and how to sensitize instruction to students’ needs under time constraints in a classroom setting. The third presentation begins with a macro look at the alignment between Tony Wagner’s "Seven Survival Skills" and US foreign language standards, and progresses to a micro look at a related Chinese language curriculum with a demonstration of what a specific lesson might look like in the classroom.

Panel 41 IMU Maple Room
Chinese Textbook Analysis and Development
本小组讨论有关汉语教材的议题。第一个研究拟用三个平面的理论,探讨现有汉语教材中词语例解的现状及不足，并尝试引入新的教学理论，改进现有模式的可能。第二个研究在对美国内的主要中文课本所在问题的基础上，沿用以学生中心的教学理念，与 HSK 和中学 AP（Advanced Placement）汉语考试为导向，设计开发了一套具有趣味性、相关性的教材。第三个研究以教材生词的复现情况为对象，主要探讨三个问题：分析为何现有教材的生词复现率普遍偏低；探索提高生词复现率的可行方法；提供供教材编写者参考的生词复现次数指标及复现模式。

Chinese Classroom: Instructional Design
The panel discusses several creative designs for Chinese classroom instruction. The first presentation demonstrates a Chinese cinema and cultural course that focuses on Chinese war and action films. The second presentation drawing on Skehan’s Information Processing Model and Levelt’s Speech Production Model, examines the influence of task planning (specified as no planning, pre-task planning and compound planning) on 15 Chinese L2 learners’ oral performance (in terms of fluency, accuracy and lexical complexity) through a picture-retelling task. The third presentation constructs 313 core chunk items and designs the content of chunk instruction for beginning learners.

Chinese Character Acquisition and Reading Instruction
The panel includes four studies about the acquisition of Chinese characters as well as reading and vocabulary instruction. The first presentation highlights some blind spots from vocabulary and reading instruction, which are even greater bottlenecks than perhaps realized. The second presentation describes mnemonic techniques and learning strategies for learning Chinese character used by first year Chinese language students. The third presentation proposes the theory of “象本位” for Chinese characters that the structure of Chinese characters is not arbitrary and the theory is closer to the core of Chinese culture value.

Chinese as Foreign Language Curriculum Development (II)
The panel consists of four studies of Chinese curriculum development. The first presentation talks about Content-Based Instruction (CBI) and describes the procedures of the CBI. The second presentation discusses the Community Service-Learning-oriented curriculum and reports the assessment of this model. The third presentation proposes a new pedagogical form of CF, synthetic feedback, and carries out a mixed design of quantitative and qualitative investigations into its efficacy in CFL classroom and how learners and teachers perceive CF. The fourth presentation discusses needs assessments in curriculum development.

Transforming a Conventional Fact/practice Curriculum with Proficiency-oriented Instruction
This panel addresses substantial efforts that faculty members in a large-sized Chinese program have made to transform their conventional fact and practice curriculum to a standards-based and proficiency-oriented one to maximize the program outcomes. The first presentation introduces the rationales for transforming a conventional fact/practice curriculum into proficiency-oriented instruction and the process of making improvements and adaptations at various levels. The second presentation introduces the improvements and adaptations made to lesson plans and activities at the novice to intermediate level. The third presentation introduces the improvements and adaptations made to lesson plans and activities at the advanced level.

Character Acquisition and Instruction

The panel discusses the acquisition and instruction of Chinese characters. The first presentation uses experimental methods and survey to examine the problems in stroke order and compare the effect of different stroke order learning on the writing and retention of Chinese characters, as well as investigates the attitudes toward stroke order learning. The second presentation examines heritage language teaching and learning in terms of characters writing skill in the college setting from both teacher and student perspectives. The third presentation conducts an empirical investigation on the relationships among logographic character recognition, production and awareness in conventional formation sequencing.

Belot College Center for Language Studies  [website: http://www.beloit.edu/cls/]

Five reasons to choose Center for Language Studies at Belot:
1. Smallest class sizes. Last summer, our average class size was 8 students. That’s significantly smaller than at similar programs.
2. Most faculty-student time. Faculty spend a minimum of three hours a day during the program being available to, and working with, students outside of class.
3. Top faculty. Speaking of: We recruit top faculty from around the world to teach alongside Beloit professors each summer. Visiting faculty in recent years have come to Beloit from institutions like Harvard and the University of Southern California, as well as from China and Japan.
4. 8 weeks in 1 year. One year of college language instruction in just 8 weeks. No, really.
5. Everyone welcome. We offer everything from beginning level to advanced. Each summer we have a diverse student population, from high school students to recent retirees.

Better Chinese LLC  [website: http://www.betterchinese.com/]

Founded by educators from Columbia University and the United Nation, Better Chinese is a leading publisher of Mandarin curricula for students of all levels, from pre-Kindergarten to college. Officially adopted by nine states in the United States and used in 1,400+ schools worldwide, the Better Chinese pedagogy, learning materials, and technologies are helping to build the next generation of Chinese language speakers. Come visit us at Booth 12!
Cheng & Tsui is the leading educational publisher of high-quality, cutting-edge Asian language textbooks and cultural supplements for all age groups. Based in Boston, Massachusetts, we pursue our mission of “Bringing Asia to the World” by providing a wide variety of language learning and cultural materials for Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Arabic, and other Asian languages. Our offerings include textbooks in print and in digital formats, literature in translation, and dictionaries as well as audio, video, and interactive media. Through our publications, we aim to promote a deeper understanding of Asia overall.

In collaboration with our authors and teachers, we continue to develop products with diverse pedagogical approaches that accommodate all learning styles and meet national standards. We partner locally with organizations that increase awareness of Asia in schools and in the community. By instilling the importance of intercultural cooperation, we hope to foster closer ties among all peoples.

The Chinese Language Teachers Association (CLTA) is a professional organization devoted exclusively to the study of Chinese language, culture and pedagogy. In the years since our establishment in 1962, the Chinese Language Teachers Association has both reflected and responded to changes in our students, our teachers and our world. While the focus of our organizational energy is most concretely evident in our various publications and at our annual meeting, we are constantly seeking to expand our range of service to the Chinese language teaching profession. Specifically, we are presently working on two major initiatives: (1) to act as an advocate for and facilitator of enhanced articulation among all Chinese language learning settings, including the integration of non-textbook-specific national standards; and, (2) to serve as a provider of teacher training programs of both a pre-service and in-service nature. We are also dedicated to enhancing classroom-based application of the results of empirical research on Chinese language acquisition and instruction.

Confucius Institutes are non-profit apolitical organizations that promote Chinese language and culture worldwide. The Confucius Institute in Indianapolis was established in 2007 through an agreement between the Office of Chinese Language Council International (Hanban) and Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI) in partnership with Sun Yet-Sen University (SYSU) in China. We are located in Cavanaugh Hall at the heart of the IUPUI campus. Our mission:

1. Teach Chinese using a variety of methods, including multimedia and Internet;
2. Train teachers to teach Chinese;
3. Administer the Chinese Proficiency Test (HSK, YCT, BCT);
4. Sponsor academic activities, culture exchange programs, and Chinese language competitions;
5. Provide consulting services for individuals to study in China;
6. Promote business exchanges;
7. Facilitate government exchanges.
Indiana Chinese Language Association of Secondary- Elementary Schools

website: http://sites.google.com/site/inchineseteachers/

To serve as a professional association for everyone who interested in teaching the Chinese language and culture at primary and secondary levels in Indiana Schools. ICLASS members will share information of professional development, teacher training, job opportunities and Chinese culture activities. ICLASS members will be eligible to compete for TOY (Teacher of the Year) ICLASS welcome all Chinese teachers of all levels as well as those who are enthusiastic in promoting and learning Chinese language and culture.

Indiana University Chinese Flagship Center website: http://www.indiana.edu/~flagship/

Indiana University’s Chinese Flagship program is a part of the Language Flagship, a federally-funded effort and a component of the National Security Education Program at the U.S. Department of Defense. Chinese Flagship Program at Indiana University provides undergraduate students the opportunity to attain professional level language proficiency through classroom learning, extracurricular activities, and overseas study, including an entire year in China. Students can major in any of IU’s many fields of study, including Business, Music, and Liberal Arts, while completing the requirements to achieve superior-level language skills and certification from The Language Flagship.

Kong and Park, Inc. website: http://kongnpark.com/

Established in 2000, KONG & PARK Inc. is a publishing company that has specialized in researching and publishing books for studying Chinese characters. The KONG& PARK research team has organized more than 3,500 Chinese characters, and based on their research, they introduced fun and faster way to learn Chinese characters by focusing on 250 root characters.

After the introduction to the root characters, their book illustrates how different characters are added to the root characters, creating different meanings and words. Given the repetition of the root characters, it enables readers to easily learn and memorize the root characters as well as the derivation of different words from them. The company applied for a patent for this unique study method in 2008 and was granted one in 2012.

Mandarin Training Center 台師大國語教學中心 website: http://mtc.ntnu.edu.tw/mtcweb/

Mandarin Training Center (MTC) was established in 1956 as an extension of National Taiwan Normal University and is the largest and leading institution dedicated to the teaching of Chinese as a second language. Through cooperation with the academic institutions such as The Graduate Institute of Teaching Chinese as a Second Language, we aim to develop model pedagogical theories and practices to satisfy the growing international interest in learning Mandarin. We offer:
1. Seasonal Programs: Regular and Intensive classes start each season.
2. Short-Term Programs:
   • Customized Language and Culture Study Tour programs offered year round.
   • 3-week Express Chinese Programs offered in March and August.
4. MTC Online: Real time and tailor-made online Mandarin classes.
5. Teacher Training Programs: 90 hours of professional training, integrated teaching theories and practices.
6. Teaching Materials: Developed more than 40 textbooks widely used by Chinese language learning centers.
The Chinese Language Center, The Open University of China (short for “The Center”) is a professional institution of Chinese teaching, research, and resources development for overseas learners.

The Center offers a wide range of learning programs and materials (including apps, online courses, audio-visual courses, multimedia courseware etc.) on Chinese language and the Chinese culture to learners throughout the world via satellite TV, the Internet and traditional publications and distribution channels.

The Center is optimizing an online platform to provide the overseas educational institutions with a total solution for distance Chinese language teaching to meet the needs of both the learners and teachers. The Center has established and has been developing the distance Chinese learning platform www.myechinese.com, which is combined with several sites, i.e. MyEChinese Learn Chinese (s.myechinese.com), MyEChinese Community (i.myechinese.com), MyEChinese Teacher Training (t.myechinese.com) and MyEChinese New HSK Online Mock Test System (hsk.myechinese.com) etc.

Pearson Education website: www.VersantTest.com

Pearson and Peking University partnered to develop the Spoken Chinese Test (SCT) that automatically assesses spoken language proficiency. The SCT can be taken over the phone or by computer and is a new way to quickly and accurately assess the spoken Chinese proficiency of Chinese language learners. The test taker gives spoken responses to eight different item types and within minutes, the testing system returns an overall score and sub-scores for grammar, vocabulary, fluency, pronunciation, and tone. The SCT can be used for placement, an exit exam or an assessment to monitor progress. The score report provides an overview of the test takers’ skill profile, strengths and weaknesses, and areas for improvement. The SCT has been extensively field tested and evaluated to verify its validity and reliability. The machine scores are highly correlated with scores provided by professors at Peking University and correlate test scores with the Hanyu Shuiping Kaoshi.

Peking University Press 北京大学出版社 website: http://en.crtvu.edu.cn/

Established in 1902, Peking University Press was the very first Chinese university press. Now it is one of the largest academic and educational publishers in China. It publishes more than 1500 new titles a year, with 3000 titles in print.

PUP is an integral part of Peking University. Sticking to the principle of “facilitating teaching and scientific research, assisting academic development and cultivating talented intellectuals”, and based on the rich resources of the University’s faculty and with support from scholars all over the world, PUP has published a remarkable range of college textbooks and scholarly works in nearly all academic disciplines.

PUP is actively pursuing international cooperation and publication exchanges with its overseas counterparts. It has established relationship with publishers from scores of countries and regions in copyrights trading and co-publishing. PUP always puts emphasis on both rights buying and selling, pursuing a well balanced development in two directions.
Phoenix Tree Publishing Inc. website: http://www.phoenixtree.com/

Phoenix Tree Publishing Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary company of Beijing Language and Culture University Press (BLCUP) in North America, was registered and established in July, 2011 in Chicago, the United States, to meet the demand of the North American market in learning Chinese language and Chinese culture.

Phoenix Tree Publishing Inc. is located at 5660 North Jersey Avenue, north of Chicago. The company is mainly engaged in the following business: marketing and distributing BLCUP’s Chinese textbooks and products of Chinese culture in the regions of North America; researching, developing, publishing and marketing localized Chinese textbooks and products of Chinese culture in the regions of North America; electronic commerce transaction; copyright trade of books; training in how to use BLCUP’s Chinese textbooks and training of Chinese language, etc.

Skritter website: http://www.skritter.com/

Skritter is an advanced character learning application designed to help students learn to better read and write Chinese characters. It uses a spaced repetition system (SRS) to ensure that everything being studied on Skritter is reviewed before it’s forgotten. Skritter also focuses on active-memory recall, having students write characters from memory, rather than just tracing what appears on a screen. The system emphasis proper stroke order, and lets students create custom vocabulary lists, definitions and mnemonics to help personalize and customize the learning experience!

Skritter exists as both a web application, and a mobile application available for both iOS and Android devices. The mobile applications allow students to study anytime, and anywhere! Skritter can also be used by teachers to create study groups, assign vocabulary lists, and track student progress. Stop by the Skritter booth to learn more about the application and Skritter’s institutional license options.
